To Those Interested in West Virginia Agriculture

It is with great pleasure that I present this first Annual "West Virginia Agricultural Statistics" book. In the future, we hope to have this publication available by October of each year.

In this bulletin are the latest figures on West Virginia's agricultural production of crops, livestock and poultry. In addition, there are prices of items purchased for use in production of agricultural commodities. Most of the information published in this bulletin was released as currently as it became available. This publication brings it all together for those of you who are interested in West Virginia's agriculture.

We wish to thank the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service for the compilation of the data. Our appreciation is also extended to the voluntary reporters who provided thousands of reports as the basic information for the data. I would also like to acknowledge the county assessors and their deputies for their contributions in the form of the Agricultural Reports.

I am

Very truly yours,

Gus R. Douglass
Agriculture Commissioner

CROP WEATHER CONDITIONS 1979 - 1980

The winter of 1979 had below average temperatures and near normal levels of precipitation. Spring brought below average temperatures and slightly above average precipitation. These combined to limit field work and pasture growth. The summer began with cool temperatures and near normal precipitation. August had above normal temperatures and above normal precipitation causing some problems with dampness and insect control. Late summer had warm temperatures and near normal precipitation. The fall months had above average temperatures and above average rainfall causing some harvesting difficulties.

The winter of 1980 temperatures averaged slightly below normal. Precipitation averaged below normal for the first time in several years. Spring brought average temperatures and precipitation. Some field work was delayed by precipitation during May. The summer had above average temperatures and above average precipitation. Precipitation caused some problems concerning insect control and hay harvesting. Fall had normal temperatures and below normal precipitation, an excellent harvesting period.

WEST VIRGINIA 1980 FIELD CROP PRODUCTION

Mountain State farm operators harvested 721,500 acres of principal crops in 1980. This was an increase of 1 percent from 1979 but up less than one-half percent from two years earlier. Added to production from these acres were 282 million pounds of apples and peaches, lower than both the 284 million pounds in 1979 and the 320 million pounds produced in 1978.

Corn acres harvested for grain fell 1,000 acres since 1979 to the 1978 level of 58,000 acres. Yield per acre matched last year at 89 bushels which resulted in production of 5,162,000 bushels, 2 percent below last year but 16 percent above 1978. Corn silage acres harvested at 37,000 were 2,000 above 1979 and 7,000 above two years earlier. Yield at 15.5 tons was one-half ton above 1979 and 2 tons above 1978. The production of 574,000 tons is 9 percent above the previous year and 42 percent over 1979.

Total acres harvested of the three small grains estimated slipped 9 percent to 29,000 acres. This was made up of 9,000 acres of winter wheat, 11,000 acres of oats and 9,000 acres of barley - each 1,000 acres below 1979. Wheat yield rose 4 bushels to 38 per acre offsetting the acreage drop such that production at 342,000 bushels was up one-half percent from the previous year and 15 percent above 1978. Oats yield slid 2 bushels to 49 per acre, thus production fell 12 percent from the previous year to 539,000 bushels. Barley yield improved 3 bushels to 44 per acre helping hold the drop in production, at 396,000 bushels, to about 3 percent.

Acres of tobacco harvested last year returned to the 1978 level of 1,500 or 200 more than last year's short crop. Yield at 1,500 was 225 pounds over 1979 but 300 pounds less than two years ago. The resultant production of 2,250,000 pounds exceeded the previous year by over a third but was 17 percent lower than in 1979.

Acres of all hay, at 595,000 acres harvested, matched 1978 and was 10,000 acres over last year. Yield returned to a more normal level at 1.64 tons per acre after a slim 1979 yield of 1.28 tons. Alfalfa acres harvested at 80,000 with yield at 2.55 tons per acre produced 204,000 tons, 37 percent above last year. All other hay acres harvested at 515,000 with yield at 1.50 produced 773,000 tons or 29 percent more than in 1979.

FRUIT PRODUCTION

Fruit production in West Virginia is mostly apples and peaches. There are some cherries and other fruits but produced in such small quantities that estimates of their production are not made.

APPLES - The 1980 apple crop of 245 million pounds was nearly 6 percent below the 1979 crop of 260 million pounds. Weather conditions were quite normal with no severe frosts or freezes. Hail damage during the growing season was minor with adequate moisture for the season.

York Imperial continued as the leading variety by a wide margin at 82 million pounds. Next in order of production was: Golden Delicious - 44 million pounds; Delicious - 39 million pounds; then Rome Beauty and Stayman at 27 and 22 million pounds respectively.

Utilization of the crop was nearly 64 percent for processing which is about normal with 156.4 million pounds used in producing canned, frozen and other products. The remaining 36 percent or 88.6 million pounds were moved into fresh market channels.

Total value of the apple crop at 7.8 cents per pound was $19,110,000. This represents a significant part of West Virginia's farm income especially when you realize that most of this production is in four counties of the Eastern Panhandle.

PEACHES - Production for 1980 was down slightly from the previous two years at 22 million pounds. Late frost reduced the crop in some of the lower elevations or pockets where air drainage was not adequate.

Average price per pound at 13.2 cents was down 3.6 cents from the previous year. This resulted in a value of production at $2,904,000 - a drop of 1.1 million dollars.
